[Court of Appeal (Civil Division)—December 10, 2002] 742
Imports—customs and excise—tobacco and alcohol—entry into the UK from

France—Directive 92/112—chargeability of excise duty—only if goods imported and held for commercial purposes under directive—seizure of goods and vehicle—customs authorities decisions to check travellers and seize goods and vehicle—both quashed on appeal—Divisional Court's decision to quash decision to check travellers upheld—fact that individuals found to be in possession of goods not raising inference that authorities had reasonable grounds to suspect that they were carrying goods liable to forfeiture—Community and domestic law permitting use of profiles and trends to identify particular individuals for checking—appeal against decision to quash decision to seize the cigarettes, tobacco and alcohol allowed—decision not axiomatically invalid as a result of invalid check—authorities' decision to seize not based on misapprehension of law—not appropriate for appeal court to determine whether particular seizures constituting breach of rights of freedom of movement and/or property—Arts 8 and 9 of Directive 92/112—concepts of "products acquired by private individuals for their own use" and "products held for commercial purposes" antithetical.
